CROPS HAVE REACHED THE GRAINING STAGE... WILL THEY REACH FARMERS?

Rain deficit, El Niño impact and power cuts keep farmers in distress

- Farmers struggling to get irrigation due to irregular power supply
- Crops at the grain stage at risk of drying
- Protests across the state against power cuts
- Only 7–8 hours of electricity supply with low voltage
- Borewells not getting adequate power, paddy crops drying up
- Farmers demand 24-hour uninterrupted power supply

Hyderabad, October 10 (T Media): Farmers across Telangana are facing severe distress due to rain deficit conditions, the impact of Super El Niño and irregular power supply. Paddy and other crops at the grain stage are not getting sufficient irrigation water as electricity supply to agricultural borewells remains erratic. In many areas, power is available for only 7 to 8 hours a day and that too with low voltage. Farmers fear that their hard work may go in vain as standing crops are drying up. Protests and road blockades by farmers demanding uninterrupted power supply are witnessed in several districts.

Farmers Protest for Uninterrupted Power Supply

Farmers under the banner of Bharatiya Kisan Sangh staged a dharna at Daulatabad Ambedkar Chowrasta in Hathnoor mandal of Sangareddy district, demanding 24-hour electricity supply for agriculture. Similar protests were reported from Medak, Karimnagar, Yadadri and other districts.
